

Jessi Briggs, Associate

BA, PGradDip(Archi Hist & Cons), M.ICOMOS, M.PHA

Jessi is a Heritage Consultant and Professional Historian, specialising in built heritage. She has extensive experience in historical research and the identification and assessment of cultural heritage. Having worked with multi-disciplinary teams, Jessi has experience across a wide scope of heritage projects relating to architecture, planning, archaeology, interpretation and community consultation.

Expertise and Experience:

Jessi has expertise in historical research and writing, and experience in architectural history and the identification and assessment of places of cultural significance. She has extensive experience with municipal heritage studies for Victorian Councils and has contributed to a range of heritage related reports and outcomes for government and private clients. These include heritage assessments, conservation management plans, interpretation of heritage places, planning scheme amendments, assessment of archaeological sites and online community engagement. She has extensive experience undertaking historical research of localities, places and people. Jessi is proficient in GIS mapping, managing Heritage Victoria's Hermes database, desktop publishing and design software. She also tutors architectural history at the University of Melbourne.

Her experience across a broad range and scale of projects in local, state and national contexts is based on a sound knowledge of legislation and cultural heritage practices in Australia. Jessi is a capable and conscientious consultant with excellent organisational and communication skills, and an eye for detail.

Work History:

Jessi was employed with Context, heritage consultants in Brunswick, from 2011 to 2015. During this time she gained extensive experience working as part of an integrated team of heritage professionals, building her expertise as a project manager and in heritage identification, assessment and management.

Prior to this in 2010-2011, Jessi held a short-term position with the Heritage Council of Victoria and Heritage Victoria. As a Hearings Support Officer for the Heritage Council, Jessi developed a working knowledge of Victorian heritage legislation and policy and current heritage practises.
